- FOREWORD

When I issued the first part of this Bibliography, it hardly entered my mind that more than a year would elapse before the publication of the second part. It hardly seemed possible that the lesser portion should involve greater difficulties than the major portion.

One of the greatest hurdles to overcome was the paper situation. Some of the papers submitted were so slimpsey, so trashy that I would have had great hesitation in using them for wrapping herrings. And for the prices demanded . . . I really believe I could have bought myself a first folio Shakespeare.

The one positive result that I derived from all this delay was the realization that there was a genuine need and demand for this work. The letters of inquiry from individuals, libraries and booksellers proved this conclusively. The excellent reviews and the flattering letters that were spontaneously sent spurred me on to complete this publication.

* * *

It has become almost axiomatic to say that nothing is as dead as yesterday's newspaper. Deader still is the best seller of yesteryear. Thus we find that anything that is not of tomorrow is automatically classed as old-fashioned. And no difference is made between the trashy, meretricious and "fly-by-night" monstrosities that strutted their brief hour and the honest, meritorious and worth-while production. All are equally discarded into the limbo of "Old Fogeydom."

It takes an intrepid soul to buck the trend, most often with disastrous results. And yet it only needs a production like the recent revival of "Craig's Wife" to open our eyes and reacquaint us with the real value that many of these plays possess. Human nature will always remain the same. And despite the Damoclean sword of atomic power hanging over their noses, humans will still go on eating their pork and beans.

In the plays mentioned herein—plays that have been popular and of the avant garde in their day—you will find the same human in his various disguises. You will find MAN who can fall lower than the lowest beasts, and MAN who can rise higher than the furthest sky!!

* * *

With but few exceptions I have included in this Bibliography only those authors who have had at least three full-length plays produced on Broadway. Under the authors chosen, I have listed every play (full-length or one-acter) and every ascertainable edition and reprint thereof.

A special feature which should be noted is the listing of scripts in the New York Public Library. Many of these scripts contain manuscript notes and corrections which are very useful in the reading and study of these plays. (I have made no attempt to check upon the dates appended to these scripts.)

I have consistently listed all plays that are condensed by Mantle in his Yearbooks. This will be helpful to those people who haven't the time or the patience to read the play in full.

I trust that this Bibliography will prove itself useful to those having occasion to use it. It is inevitable that some mistakes will be found. I will gladly welcome additions and corrections.
